

Professional Embalmers' Association of Ireland NEWS

After the successful meeting in University College Cork, the Professional Embalmers' Association of Ireland is going swiftly towards leading standards in the funeral service sector.

The PEAI started with only four members in 2004. With only less than 10 years since its birth, we now have almost 100 members actively involved in raising standards of embalming in Ireland and even in parts of Europe. This is a remarkable growth that no other embalming association in Ireland has yet achieved.

We have been engaging with government bodies regarding implementation of standards in the funeral service and the practice of embalming. The PEAI will be taking part in the The National Council for End of Life Care in Ireland Forum 2013 which will take place in 24th October 2013. Our contact details and direct link to the PEAI website may also be downloaded in the Citizens Information website under the useful contacts directory (www.citizensinformation.ie).

The PEAI will be supporting the first ever Funeral Trade Show by Funeral Times which will take place in October 1-2. We will be taking a unit through the courtesy of the Funeral Times. The educational session held every meeting for the members of the PEAI will this time be extended to all visitors and guests coming to the Funeral Times Trade Show. The PEAI will be sponsoring an hour of exciting and informative talks from a couple of government agencies that play relevant and crucial roles in the funeral practice. Also the DCA of Ireland will be giving an educational talk regarding 'Caring for Grieving Families- Your Work and Your Health'.

The PEAI Annual General Meeting will also be held in Citywest Dublin in October 2, 2013. We will be presenting certificates to new members who have recently qualified in professional embalming.
